Since its 1994 opening, the Native American Museum has been dedicated to serving the whole family. Each month we have a special program or activity which is open to the public. Many Scout troops have earned badges here, and we are always happy to host groups for special events and activities. Please call us for a reservation.

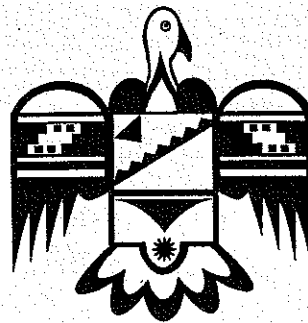

The Heirloom Garden and permanent exhibits feature things which were used in the daily lives of the Great Lakes Indians.

Our playground, gardens, hiking trails, picnic tables, fishing pond, Nature Center, and Native American Museum make Dobbs Memorial Park a great destination for people of all ages. Hope to see you soon!

Please join us for two special exhibits put together by local friends of the Museum. These will run from January to July, 2007.

Indiana DNR archaeologist Bill Mangold has lent items from his collection of false faces and stone carvings. "Iroquois Art: Heritage in Stone" features works of art which are part of the culture of the feared and respected Haudonosaunee people of the Northeastern United States.

In the summer of 2006, local photographer Marianne Rudd traveled to Montana and photographed the dancers at the North American Indian Days Powwow. Her black and white images capture the beauty and power of native dance.
